

The language of flowers

When Nellie makes her St Valentine's Day card for Tom Thompson, she learns that flowers have their own special meanings. Why don't you give someone a bunch of flowers to send them a secret message?!

There are some examples below, but there are lots more on the internet, too.

Or you could cut out some paper doilies to make a Valentine for someone you care about, just like Nellie did. Inside, write three things you really like about them. Here are some ideas:

- I like how you always share you lunch with me when I've forgotten mine.
- I get excited when I see you waiting for me at the bus stop.
- I am so grateful that you include me in lunchtime games.

Ivy:
Patience;
faithfulness

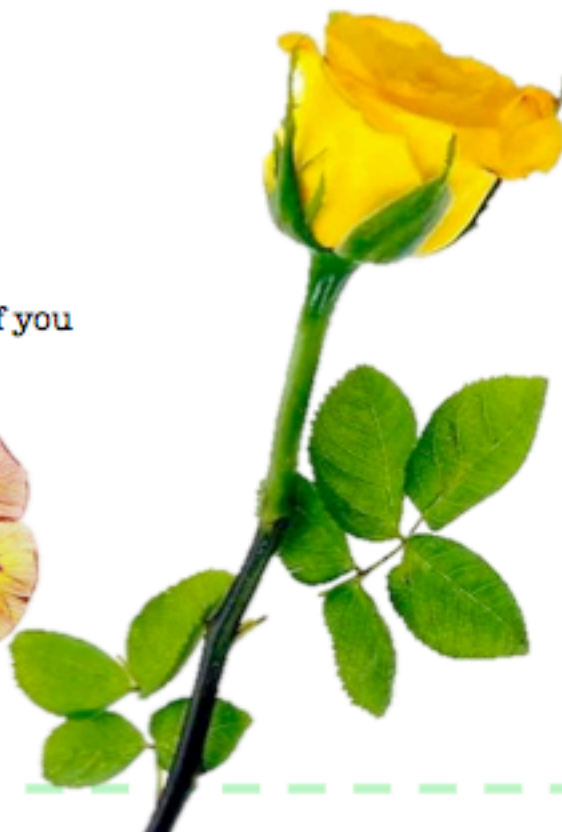

Red rose:
I love you

Pansy:
Thoughts of you

Yellow rose:
Friendship

Forget me not:
Do not forget me

Rosemary:
Remembrance

White rose:
I am worthy of you

White lily:
Purity
